

Dominick Stephens
Research Economist
Westpac Institutional Bank

Dominick joined Westpac as a Research Economist in 2006, after six years at the Reserve Bank of New Zealand, where he was closely involved in forecasting and interest rate policy under two different Governors. He has published research on exchange rate forecasting, macroeconomic modelling, New Zealand's housing market, and New Zealand's labour market. He is originally from Christchurch, and graduated from the University of Canterbury in 1999 with a Bachelor of Science with 1st Class Honours in Economics.